Charlotte Law Firm Embraces Six Sigma with Acrowire's Help Resulting in Timelines 25 to 30 Percent Better than the Competition

Charlotte, North Carolina (Wednesday, March 20, 2013) – Acrowire, a strategic business and technology consulting company, partnered with The Hunoval Law Firm, PLLC, to provide strategic and technical guidance to help manage their growth.

“When our team was brought in to review Hunoval’s technology platform, we quickly realized their processes were in great need of revitalization,” says Acrowire President Ted Theodoropoulos. “They had a very manual process in place, involving paper trails, and it was not scalable. That’s when we brought on a Six Sigma black belt to work with Hunoval to streamline processes, identify inefficiencies and reduce defects.”

“Acrowire used the Six Sigma framework to create a disciplined, data-driven approach and methodology to our team, resulting in 25 to 30 percent better timelines than our competition when comparing the time a bank forecloses on a property to the time we sell the property,” says Matt Hunoval, CEO of The Hunoval Law Firm. “In addition, we have acquired an immense increase in productivity and efficiencies.”

Although Hunoval was reaping many advantages by using the Six Sigma platform, Acrowire had just one concern. “Hunoval needed to adopt Six Sigma as a strategic part of their business,” says Theodoropoulos. “It needed to be in the firm’s DNA to truly be effective.”

Embracing Acrowire’s advice, Hunoval is now the first law firm to partner with the University of North Carolina’s Center for Lean Logistics and Engineered Systems for ongoing Six Sigma training.
